

CAMRA – Online Editorial System

Our clients have a wide range of requirements and we aim to provide the most comprehensive and flexible solution possible. In this case, the editorial team required a system that would allow them to manage all the data within their publication, including online searching and full rich-text editing. They utilised our fully integrated real-time proofing system, which links seamlessly to their editorial site to typeset the publication in accordance to their specification in parallel to editing their data, reducing production costs.

The CMS enables CAMRA to check progress throughout the gathering and updating of entries, by editors or sub-editors. No more waiting for all entries to be completed to start checking sections, this can be done as the entries arrive or on a batch basis. Indexing is automatic, saving time and ensuring accuracy with no omissions. Since auto pagination is part of the system, extent of the copy can be calculated at any time.

Entrant or Remote Users

The editorial system is locked down by IP security and logon screen. For entrant and remote editors, there are special keys which are control by the editorial team for accessing certain levels of the system. All databases are held on high-end servers tailored for high volume and redundancy. The system has also been design for full scalability.

Update and Track Entries

Editors can check changes within the system by simply viewing the change log. Any changes made to a field entry are indicated to the editor, these can be viewed as track changes. All the data within the CMS is audited, including moving around the system by users. This gives the administrator the flexibility and quick diagnostics for any potential fault on the user's behalf.

Real-Time Press Proof

The editorial team can proof any entry, region or section at any time online. The editor will be delivered a finished press proof, if they require spot colour or monochrome, they just need to set the global settings. Section pages, images, fillers, table of contents and cross-index can be compiled all at the same time, saving time in production.
